THE ART OF GRACIOUS LIVING - Upper East Side

Control your environment in this private, elegant townhouse with superb outdoor space. Located on one of the best Upper East Side blocks, this exquisite Neo-Georgian townhome offers timeless elegance and magnificent living spaces, with the safety and privacy only a townhouse can offer. Originally constructed in 1872 by the notable architect John Prugue, the home's interiors are beautifully designed by Ronald Bricke. 163 East 64th Street boasts 5 bedrooms, 4 bathrooms, and 3 elegant powder rooms, with the ability to add an additional floor. This townhouse exudes luxury, and has been lovingly designed with inlaid marble and wood flooring, lush carpeting, exquisitely carved wood moldings and paneling, high gesso ceilings throughout, and resplendent fabric walls. The raked limestone and red brick facade was designed by the craftsmen that restored the cathedral church of St. John the Divine. The gorgeous façade features a state-of-the-art illumination system, and there is a radiant snow-melting system in the blue limestone sidewalk and Fourth Floor rear terrace. Intelligently designed, this magnificent home offers room-by-room climate controls, an elevator serving every level, a security system, and high-quality sound systems, ideal for entertaining. # Change Is Good

I've been having a lot of conversations lately with industry giants about the future of retail, the impact of fashion and responsible consumerism. Current times are propelling the evolution of these ideas that have contributed to the uglier side of fashion like environmental pollution, overproduction and other unsustainable practices. On the flip side, fashion is a multibillion-dollar industry that employs millions of workers. Changes will trickle down to their ability to survive. This tension is at the core of the ensuing alterations that will be more profound than the shifting length of our skirts next season.

Local tastemakers like Donna Karan, who has advocated for conscious consumerism for years, and Joseph Altuzarra, who sees this moment as a pivotal juncture, are pushing for change. We address this altering landscape with Altuzarra in one of our features. His point of view is as compelling as his upcoming fall presentation that's poetic and relatable.

Our très stylish cover star, Olivia Palermo, is an example of how adaptable this industry can be by embracing an influencer as a powerful voice in fashion. From the legacy of Judith and Gerson Leiber to the up-and-coming designing duo behind HAIKI, stories in this issue are a testimonial to fashion's pliancy and the resilience of those shaping it.

This edition is a quiet homage to an industry that's near and dear to my heart, its continued inspiration and the creative talent it attracts. Time will tell what it will look like next year, but I, for one, am rooting for it.

and her beloved husband, artist Gerson Leiber, lived there—and were happily married—for 72 years. Gerson built the museum on the grounds of their home out of his love for Judith. She designed over 3,500 unique handbags in her lifetime, and the museum has 600 on display. The peaceful gardens are filled with Gerson's sculptures and there is a path that they took from their home each day to the museum. # Love and Fashion

Fall fashion magazines have always been a turning point for me. The issues tease us with the knowledge that summer is almost over, even though the weather is still sunny and warm. I am always excited to see the beautiful pages of chic fashion and accessories. So many fashion brands are opening pop-up shops in the Hamptons that will be here through the fall. Our editors put together a roundup of the new shops that have opened up on the East End.

The Leiber Collection is truly a crown jewel in the Springs of East Hampton—and a must for anyone who loves fashion and a good love story. I was invited on a private tour arranged by Mia Ljungberg Nevado, a dear friend who has made such an incredible impact on the Hamptons community. She was leaving the Hamptons and moving back to Stockholm with her family, so it was a beautiful way to be together before her departure. Judith Leiber

A SOIGNE SELECTION OF THIS WEEK'S MUST-TRIES. BY THE EDITORS

Sun hat from Sarah Bray's new brand, Sarah Bray Bermuda

HEAD TRIP

After a decade of publishing endeavors, Hamptons magazine's former Style Director Sarah Bray (sarahbraybermuda.com) decided to launch a sustainable brand of sun hats after falling in love and moving to Bermuda. Inspired by her passion for vintage fashion and decor, she intended to debut the collection at her summer wedding, but the pandemic caused some necessary changes. Not one to let anything derail her ambitions, Bray introduced her line in April and completely sold out of the first batch of hats. Each one is carefully fashioned by local craftsmen from biodegradable tropical grasses and palm leaves, and finished with interchangeable antique ribbons. Currently making waves on the 'gram with her whimsical headwear, Bray is next planning a summer garden party pop-up in the Hamptons, much to the delight of hat-loving locals.

RALPH ROAST

Ralph's Coffee, the global coffee shop from iconic designer and coffee devotee Ralph Lauren, brings its signature selection of hot and cold beverages out East with a new pop-up at two Ralph Lauren Hamptons locations. Expect favorites such as Ralph's Roast coffee, espresso and teas, espresso tonic, Ralph's iced tea, lemonade and more. 41 Jobs Lane, Southampton; 31-33 Main St., East Hampton, ralphlauren.com

SMOOTH OPERATOR

Banniere (banniereco.com) founder Olivia Meyer traveled near and far to create the Hamptons scarf ($250), ultimately partnering with watercolor illustrator Jessica Mintz on the final product. An homage to Meyer's favorite summer destination, the 100% silk twill scarf can be worn around the head and neck, as a halter top or even as a bandeau.

PAGE TURNERS

Conscience Point

Writer and blogger Tade Reen presents his newest work, Conscience Point ($20), a fictional love story that paints a layered image of the many different personalities and archetypes that form the unique social bubble we call the Hamptons. The novel is about following your heart at all costs, how chance encounters can change our lives forever and the sacrificial choices we make for love.

22 Minutes of Unconditional Love

In 22 Minutes of Unconditional Love ($26, Farrar, Straus and Giroux), literary critic, essayist and novelist Daphne Merkin gives us a captivating, provocative read about breaking free of sexual obsession. The author shares her witty observations on love, marriage, family, sex, gender and relationships through the lens of a young woman engrossed in a steamy affair.

Paris Never Leaves You

Guggenheim fellow and author Ellen Feldman is back with a new novel—and it's a gripper. Paris Never Leaves You ($17, St. Martin's Griffin) alternates between wartime Paris and the 1950s New York publishing world in this tale of resilience and survival. According to acclaimed literary critic Heather Morris, it's something that will "stay with you for a long time."

INDULGE

IKRAA (ikraacaviar.com) now offers a VIP Hamptons delivery service to further up the luxe factor on its delicious products. The gift set of Imperial Osetra caviar, truffle butter, French mini blinis and two mother-of-pearl spoons ($1,680) will arrive at your abode within hours of purchase. Same-day delivery is available Monday to Sunday from 11AM to 8PM on orders of at least 1 pound.

BAMBOO BLING

Jewelry designer Silvia Furmanovich is launching her latest Amazonia Bamboo collection this fall. Available at Mayfair Rocks, this woven bamboo offering is unique for its flexibility, durability and resilience. Furmanovich's inspiration comes from Japanese artists' treatment that turns bamboo into art. Maturing in only two to three months—far more rapidly than traditional wood—and with a lifespan of 20 years, bamboo has captivated Furmanovich with remarkable results. The pieces are set in 18K gold with precious stones and diamonds, creating a statement-making piece of jewelry for any occasion. 19 Main St., East Hampton, mayfairrocks.com; silviafurmanovich.com

STEPPIN' OUT

THIS LOCAL CULTURAL INSTITUTION IS THE PLACE TO BE WITH MANY INITIATIVES THAT CELEBRATE ITS OUTDOOR SPACE. BY SPOOR THI SATHEESH

Current times are compelling us to discover new ways to enjoy the outdoors. Southampton Arts Center is at the forefront of this shift by putting its beautiful grounds to good use. Its safe and expansive canvas is host to Friday and Saturday night movie screenings, a number of alfresco concerts (The Hoodoo Loungers are coming soon), children's programming, art workshops and wellness offerings (SoulCycle recently kicked off classes seven days a week here) to keep your weekends fit and full. Still, at the core of these fun activities is an art hub that has fortuitously increased its creative output. "We took the opportunity to create an outdoor art installation," says Amy Kirwin, artistic director at SAC. "We have wanted to do that for some time, and this was the perfect moment to expand our exhibition space to the east and west lawn. We are very fortunate to have our beautiful and expansive grounds to activate during these challenging times." 25 Jobs Lane, Southampton, southamptonartscenter.org

BY PHEBE WAHL

When did you start developing your style?

From such an early age!

I remember playing dress-up as a small girl and staging photo shoots with my sister.

Do you have any signature looks?

I never leave home without a blowout and clean manicure. My leather Saint Laurent jacket is a seasonal staple. I wear it every day, and it gets better with age.

What pieces in your wardrobe make you feel empowered?

My Rolex watch. I worked really hard to buy it for myself for my 30th birthday. Most of the time, I feel the most empowered when I am confident and comfortable. I have a pretty relaxed sense of personal style.

How would you describe your style?

Classic and feminine. During the week, I'm in a very standard work uniform: jeans, tee, blazer and ballet flats. When it comes time to dress up, you will find me decked out! Dior, McQueen, Valentino, Gucci and vintage.

Who is your style icon? My clients—they are my muses and inspire me every single day.

Game, Set, Match

ONE OF THE HAMPTONS' MOST SOUGHT-OUT SPORTING EVENTS RETURNS FOR ITS SIXTH RENDITION.

BY CLAIRE HARPER

Back by popular demand, some of tennis' greatest players head out East for the sixth annual Johnny Mac Tennis Project Pro-Am Tournament. Hosted by the McEnroe brothers, John and Patrick, the one-day event features a round-robin-style tournament where participants have the chance to play alongside former WTA and ATP World Tour professionals, Division 1 college players and John McEnroe Tennis Academy pros.

But the best part isn't just the game; it's the major giving-back component. The event raises funds for John McEnroe's nonprofit Johnny Mac Tennis Project (JMTP), which aids youths by removing racial, economic and social barriers to success through tennis. "This year, more than ever, I really want the focus to be on the amazing kids we are able to help by raising money through this event," shares the JMTP founder. With coveted silent auction items, including a Maison Atia Colette faux fur blue paon reversible peacoat, a seven-night stay at Hotel Wailea, and a signature facial treatment from celeb esthetician Vicki Morav, among others, it won't be hard to raise money for the children.

The pro-am also introduces a few new and fashionable aspects this year: "In addition to a curated silent auction, on which people can bid both in-person and virtually, we will have two great pop-up shops on-site for people to browse. Maison Atia and Michael Andrews Bespoke are hosting trunk shows during the tournament, with a percentage of the proceeds being donated back," says JMTP executive director Jordan Botjer

When the worlds of fashion, charity and celebs (did we mention past attendees include Chelsea Handler, Jane Krakowski, Alec Baldwin and Alan Cumming?) combine, it's guaranteed to be a total ace. Tickets $2,000-$35,000, Aug. 29, 320 Abrahams Path, East Hampton, jmtpony.org/proam2020

LAMBORGHINI'S AVENTADOR SVJ IS A SUPERCAR WITH A PERSONALITY UNLIKE ANY OTHER. BY NATE CHAPNICK

Named after a massive 1,118-pound Spanish fighting bull, Lamborghini's (lamborghini.com) Aventador SVJ is a force to be reckoned with. This exotic vehicle is aptly named, with SV standing for superveloce, or superfast. It also carries the J for the jota designation to denote its track and performance superiority, having recently claimed the Nürburgring production car record. Yet, unlike most supercars that can only be truly enjoyed on the nicest of days and rubber-friendly roads, Lamborghini's sophisticated all-wheel-drive system ensures this Aventador is as perfect a companion on a beautiful fall day as it is in the dead of winter. This everyday supercar, however, is anything but mundane, eliciting countless spontaneous photo requests no matter where it goes.

The heart of the Aventador SVJ is in the back, where a mighty 6.5-liter V-12 engine is never at rest, pumping out a massive 770 horsepower. Mated to an independent shifting rod 7-speed transmission that's capable of 50-millisecond gearshifts, the Aventador SVJ screams from 0 to 62 mph in only 2.8 seconds. In addition, the supercar emits an unforgettable sound, rivaled only by a Formula One race car flying down the straight at Indianapolis.

Lamborghini worked extensively to tune the Aventador SVJ for maximum agility and superior driving dynamics. A special four-wheel steering system lends uncanny agility on and off the racetrack. At low speeds, the rear wheels face in opposite directions on a corner, thereby requiring a lighter steering input for improved performance through curves or in tight spaces. At higher speeds, the front and rear wheels share the same steering angle, which has the effect of essentially extending the wheelbase to improve stability. Further defying physics is Lamborghini's new active aerodynamics system, which uses electrical actuators to constantly optimize the vehicle's aerodynamics by adjusting flaps and spoilers based on the current driving conditions.

Inside, the Aventador SVJ feels like a fighter jet cockpit. Aviation-inspired toggle switches control everything from the lights to the windows, while a brilliant flip-up red cover reveals the engine start-stop button underneath. Like the all-glass cockpits of Boeing's 787 Dreamliner, the Aventador SVJ features a new customizable instrument cluster, which changes depending on the four drive modes selected. Buyers can also completely customize the interior of their exotic marvel—right down to the stitch patterns on the seats, with Lamborghini's Ad Personam personalization program. With a limited production of 900 units, the Aventador SVJ is destined to be a collectors' item, even with its $517,770 starting price.

A FIRST-GENERATION INDIAN AMERICAN MAKES EMPATHY A FAMILY HEIRLOOM.

BY ANNELISE PETERSON

From top left: Interior designer and founder of UNICEF Project Lion Purvi Padia in her Bridgehampton home; Padia's Lioness fine jewelry collection.

Fashion is brave. A vehicle for self-expression, it takes risks, sets trends, manifests culture and reflects an attitude. Purvi Padia (purvipadia.com), renowned residential interior designer and founder of UNICEF's Project Lion, fearlessly redefines fashion, taking it out of the dressing room and across the continent.

With an aim to improve the lives of India's 1.5 million orphaned children, Padia launched the Project Lion initiative in 2018 to change the trajectory of India's most vulnerable children. "It sounds cliché, but when I saw the movie Lion at a UNICEF private screening, a lightbulb went off in my head," she shares. Soon after, the first-generation Indian American powerhouse partnered with London Jewelers to launch the Lioness collection of women's charms, necklaces, rings and bracelets solidifying the relationship between fashion and philanthropy in solid 14K gold. "A lioness is a symbol of ferocity, bravery and grace—similar to women around the world," says Padia. "By wearing this piece, you are not only claiming your power as a woman, but also empowering India's children who don't have mothers and families to dream of a bigger, brighter future."

Clearly this fiercely passionate female has changed lives abroad, exceeding goals by providing 1,697 childcare institutions with housing for more than 169,400 orphans; creating skills and development programs; reuniting displaced families; and empowering 5,483 child-protection functionaries and government officials. This summer, Padia will continue her pursuit "to fulfill our human obligation to show empathy and love to fellow humans" by expanding the Lioness collection to more accessible price points. All net proceeds directly support India's children devoid of basic human rights.

Born in the Bronx to two Indian physicians who emigrated to the United States to reach their full potential, the entrepreneur, humanitarian and mother of two currently splits her time between her Aman-esque oasis in Bridgehampton, her modern West Village apartment and her beach house in the Bahamas. When asked about her hopes for America's future, her focus remains on its children. "If I only had one wish or one thing that I could change, it would be to ensure that every child on this planet is given a proper education," Padia says. "I don't just mean in math and the sciences, but I mean a true education that encompasses equity, social justice and international affairs."

Back-to-school (or Zoom) fashion is upon us. Perhaps it's time to join the pride and invest in a family heirloom—a piece of jewelry that represents a commitment to an empathetic state of mind. Diamonds are forever, as is a fiercely stylish attitude of altruism, compassion and gratitude for privilege that knows no borders. In the words of this dedicated Indian American activist and Hamptonite, "Nothing you truly love or that makes you feel good is ever out of style."

BURIED TREASURE IS FOUND WITHIN THE WORK AND MIND OF A LOCAL ARTIST WHOSE FEMININE TOUCH IS NATURE-SENT.

BY ERICA PRATT

I briefly met Sylvia Hommert, a former fashion designer for Donna Karan and Ralph Lauren, at a party at Urban Zen last fall. Her art appeals to me on many levels but first and foremost, I find it entirely and refreshingly feminine. The glossy surfaces reveal works that are at once elusive yet approachable, inviting yet dangerous, graceful yet labored. There seems to be in each a buried treasure ready to be uncovered. Anxious to know more about the woman behind these ephemeral works, I invited Hommert for an electronic chat, and she graciously obliged my interest...

How did you make the transition from the garment industry to working as a full-time artist? I always drew and painted, and I spent all my free time in galleries and museums. I tended to date artists because it was what I liked. Art leveled me out. If money were no object, I would have chosen to study fine art, but I didn't. Which probably helped, because when I became a full-time artist, I entered with a business mind. I sent letters and images to galleries, and I was picked up by a few galleries within the first year, which is highly unusual.

Tell me about your artistic process. I am interested in the interactive play between light, surfaces, textures and resins. I work a lot with holographic paper; I absolutely love it. I inundate myself with layers. It's almost a conveyor-belt situation: I bury something on the surface to dig it out later, and then I seal it with resin. I began working with geometric, minimalist patterns. Even though I have moved away from that, nature and its organic calendar has always been a constant in my work.

What relationship would you like to see between your art and the viewer?

I like the idea when you hang something on your wall, it changes moods; it shifts over the hours. I want it to interact with you! I believe it is important what you live with. I always feel comforted when I exist alongside something a friend gave to me. It's heartwarming.

The art world can be challenging. How do you navigate it?

It certainly can be finicky, but I feel comfortable where I exist in the art world just as I did within the fashion space. We all experience varying amounts of success at different times in our lives. I really like the idea of peaking when I am older, and I can see that happening with art. I expect to live to a ripe old age with a body of work that I am proud of.

What do you enjoy most about life in the Hamptons?

I love the rich community we have here, the camaraderie. There is a wonderful group of artists around here, and it's a nice place to do what we do. I treasure The Watermill Center, the LongHouse Reserve, Almond's Artists & Writers series, and oh so many countless others! Sylvia Hommert is represented by Sara Nightingale Gallery in Sag Harbor and various others across the U.S., saranightingale.com; sylviahommert.com

STYLE

Shown here with its Move product family, Messika Paris styles its pieces by layering and mixing diamond jewels across various sets and collections.

TRUE COLORS

MESSIKA PARIS DEBUTS ITS LUCKY MOVE COLOR COLLECTION AT HAMPTONS' LONDON JEWELERS, PUTTING A VIBRANT SPIN ON CLASSIC LUCKY CHARM MEDALLIONS. BY CELIA KONSTANTELOU

Valérie Messika, founder of Messika Paris (messika.com), has conquered the art of rewriting jewelry codes by creating new ways to wear diamonds. The designer's September 2020 launch will be no different. Unconventional and lustrous, the Lucky Move Color collection is composed of nine colored stones—malachite, onyx, lapis lazuli, zircote wood, turquoise, carnelian and gray, white and pink mother-of-pearl—and nine corresponding mantras so each piece can be worn as an empowering talisman. Lucky Move Color is the first of its kind to not use pure diamonds, allowing modern women to rock their jewelry in a mix-and-match fashion, elevating everyday styles with a little sparkle—and some positive energy.

Sisters Chloe and Halle Bailey have stayed busy during quarantine shooting Fendi's (fendi.com) new campaign in their backyard. For the first time in history, the Italian fashion house has granted creative control on its launch, passing over the reins to the talented pair to render the Peekaboo the new "it" bag of the season.

The stage partners assembled their own creative team and came up with a concept that didn't fail to impress. Directed by Andrew Makadsi, the campaign's video follows the sisters wandering around their home's outdoor spaces, from the tennis courts to the pool, while carrying different iterations of the Peekaboo bag. Their catchy new song, "Busy Boy," can be heard playing in the background, capturing the collection's modern, playful spirit. And, in case you were wondering, the Peekaboo bags go swimming as well.

"#MeAndMyPeekaboo celebrates the intimate family relationships that represent inseparable bonds, and there is no more visible pair of sisters right now than Chloe x Halle," says Silvia Venturini Fendi, the brand's creative director. Seeing the famous sisters holding each other's hands along their limelight journey has been "refreshing," she adds.

Thanks to photographer Julian Dakdouk, the images of the campaign are equally stunning. Styled by Zerina Akers—also the stylist behind Chloe x Halle's mentor Beyoncé's new visual album, Black is King—the sisters pose in ladylike yet bold outfits that complement their Fendi Peekaboo.

"We have always been huge fans of the Fendi brand, as it is the perfect mixture of classy and sexy," Chloe x Halle say in a Q&A. "There is not just one favorite way for us to style our Peekaboo. What we love about it is how universal it is; we can literally wear it with anything."

Fendi's fashionably functional Peekaboo features a new accordion-frame shape, opening in a deep "smile" to reveal inside pockets. The bag is also interchangeable in smooth leather or precious skins, and can be personalized with one's initials. And, just like a game of peekaboo, the collection won't stay hidden much longer; the must-have bags are set to hit stores this month.

Pot of Gold

FROM A CHALLENGING YEAR EMERGE GLORIOUSLY COLORFUL AND OPTIMISTIC COLLECTIONS FROM THE WATCHMAKING INDUSTRY. THERE'S HAPPINESS AHEAD.

BY BARBARA PALUMBO

If 2020 has proven itself to be anything, it would have to be consistent. What started as a year with incredible promise turned quickly into another dimension filled almost daily with surprises of the unsettling variety.

Thankfully—and largely due to creative minds forced into isolation—this year has still managed to produce its fair share of beauty in the form of art, fashion, music and groundbreaking design. While some sectors of the luxury market showed fewer new collections and big releases than typical, the high-end Swiss watchmaking industry took a slightly different approach as it continued to provide the world more of what it desperately needed: brightly hued rainbows and proverbial pots of gold.

Here are several colorful and bold gold watches that would turn even the darkest of days a little brighter.

Rolex Oyster Perpetual Day-Date 36

While shades of the rainbow have adorned watch dials for years, the trend of using a spectrum of multicolored gemstones or enamels to liven a watch's bezel or beautify its markers kicked into high gear in 2018 when Rolex (rolex.com) released the Rainbow Daytona in its signature Everose gold edition. The iconic brand has continued producing colorful watches to the praise of those desiring a feel-good timepiece, and the Oyster Perpetual Day-Date 36 is no exception.

Boasting a meticulously set full-diamond dial encased in 18K white gold, this version of the Oyster Perpetual Day-Date 36 shows off its bright side with 10 rainbow-colored baguette-cut sapphires at the hour markers. The watch's attributes include hour, minute and seconds hands; day and date functions in separate apertures; and an impressive 70-hour power reserve.

Maillon de Cartier

If there's one wristwatch brand that pays as much attention to overall outer design as it does movements and complications, it is, unquestionably, Cartier (cartier.com). The house is known the world over for its high jewelry collections—as much as it is for its iconic timepieces—many of which have been worn by the likes of Michelle Obama, Andy Warhol and Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis.

This year's release of the gold Maillon de Cartier offers a twist—literally—on the geometric watches Cartier often produces. The watch's thick, curved links seem to flow diagonally into the case itself, allowing it to double as a stylish piece of bold gold jewelry.

Breitling Superocean Heritage '57 Limited Edition

One of the most positive effects of seeing a rainbow appear in the sky after a storm is that everyone is filled with a warming sense of happiness. Rainbows are gender neutral, and, thankfully, rainbow-colored watches are now contemplated, designed and created with that same concept in mind.

The introduction of Breitling's (breitling.com) Superocean Heritage '57 limited edition in rainbow last April caused quite a frenzy among watch enthusiasts: It was the first time the brand had been so daring and playful with color. With only 250 pieces and exclusively available at Breitling boutiques, this edition of the Superocean Heritage '57 was created with a 42 mm stainless-steel case and features a bidirectional rotating bezel with an ultrahard black ceramic bezel ring. The timepiece's black dial serves as a backdrop to its most striking characteristic: the splashes of vibrant color marking the hours at 12, 3, 6 and 9 o'clock. The hour markers and the hour and minute hands are coated with Super-LumiNova in an orderly graduation of yellow, green, blue, indigo, violet, red and orange—for those who like a continued feeling of joy once the lights go down.

Chanel Première

Chanel (chanel.com) is the gift that keeps on giving. If you ever wondered if the brand is going to trip up and release something subpar, you needn't worry. Chanel hits it out of the park every time, in every way, in every genre, including in its line of watches.

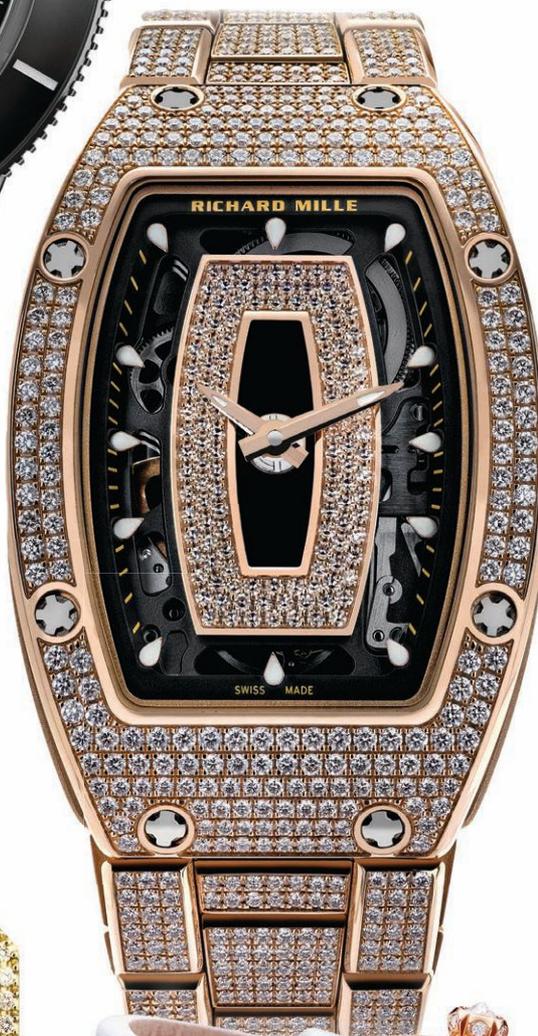

The Première timepiece by Chanel is the ultimate feel-good fashion timepiece. This version's dial is made in an octagonal black lacquer with faceted edges and is surrounded by a halo of natural round brilliant-cut diamonds set in 18K yellow gold. The crown of the watch is accented with a single cabochon onyx gemstone to complement the dial, and the open chainlike feel of the accompanying gold bracelet gives it a delicious, in-demand edginess.

Richard Mille RM 07-01 Automatic Winding

There's no rule that states that the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow needs to be one specific color. In fact, there are a plethora of colors from which to choose, particularly as it pertains to the gold used in creating fine timepieces.

Richard Mille's (richardmille.com) red gold RM 07-01 automatic winding diamond watch would still be a major treasure to find at the end of any rainbow. This highly mechanical timepiece boasts an in-house-designed automatic skeletonized movement—the caliber CRMA2—with baseplate and bridges machined from grade 5 titanium. If that information is not enough to evoke a sense of joy, consider that this timepiece was created with a power reserve of nearly 50 hours, which is a rare attribute for a diamond-set watch produced specifically for women.

Chopard Imperiale Joaillerie Rainbow

Chopard (chopard.com) set itself apart years ago when it began producing some of its jewelry and timepieces using responsibly sourced materials, ethically mined gems and fair-mined gold. The brand is a leader in a movement that shines a light on how the luxury sector can step up in regard to responsibility for the planet and its people—all while still creating moment-making timepieces and jaw-dropping jewels.

The 36 mm Imperiale Joaillerie rainbow timepiece is set with baguette-cut sapphires in traditional rainbow shades. The gemstones are set specifically so that their colors blend together in a subtle and elegant rainbowlike gradient, which frames its diamond accented mother-of-pearl dial. The Imperiale Joaillerie rainbow is available with either a white or gray alligator leather strap at authorized Chopard boutiques. ■

Fashion's New Humanism

LUXURY BRANDS TAKE A MORE THOUGHTFUL APPROACH TO BUSINESS— FROM SUSTAINABLE PRACTICES TO UPCYCLING PROGRAMS TO CONSCIOUS CONSUMPTION AND BEYOND.

BY SARI ANNE TUSCHMAN

From top: For fall/winter 2020, Stella McCartney distinguished itself once again with eco-efficient performance fabrics, buttery soft faux leathers, biodegradable stretch denim and bio-based recyclable faux fur; a longtime feeling of responsibility for the world's sustainable beauty makes Brunello Cucinelli one of fashion's most progressive proponents of ethical sourcing and manufacturing clothes that are meant to last. Both the land the designer, seen here with his family, uses and the people he employs are valued: Cucinelli instituted farm-to-table lunches in the company canteen and time limits on employee workdays.

The ever-changing tides of 2020 have had an effect on nearly every business imaginable—no one, including the fashion industry, has been immune. What has risen to the surface is a softer, more thoughtful approach to all things sartorial from some of the biggest luxury houses on the market. Whether it's a commitment to more sustainable practices or responsible actions in the age of a pandemic, brands are making a statement.

Stella McCartney

No brand has led the sustainable charge with more gusto than Stella

McCartney, whose "ethical and modern company" believes it is "responsible for the resources it uses and the impact it has on the environment."

To wit, her fall collections bring with them two new materials. For pre-fall 2020, McCartney launched Koba fur-free fur, the world's first bio-based and recyclable faux fur created from Sorona. Meanwhile, the autumn 2020 collection introduced the first biodegradable stretch denim made from plant-based yarns, a collaboration with Italian manufacturer Candiani. These launches prove once again the undeniable, increasing relevance of eco-friendly fashion.

Chanel

Last March, Chanel announced Mission 1.5°, its four-pronged commitment to fighting climate change. "The climate crisis represents the biggest issue of our age and demands urgent action to reduce negative environmental impacts and drive broader change," says Chief Sustainability Officer Andrea d'Avack. Among the tenets are the reduction of Chanel's carbon footprint by 50% by 2030 and its supply chain emissions by 40% per unit sold by 2030, as compared to 2018. The company has also pledged to focus on responsible sourcing and production of raw materials while simultaneously reexamining how it designs, manufacturers, moves and distributes goods.

Whether a new build or renovation, Chanel boutiques are now held to the highest environmental standards: 65 are currently LEED certified, with more than 40 on their way. The house will also transition to 100% renewable electricity in its operations by 2025, will finance climate-change adaptation for communities and landscapes in need of assistance, and will invest in related scientific research.

Brunello Cucinelli

Brunello Cucinelli has customized its approach to sustainability in ways that stay true to the brand's ethos and are paramount to the founder, who was raised in Umbria, Italy. "I feel responsible for the beauty of the world," says Cucinelli. "Surrounded surplus inventory in boutiques to organizations in need. The total amount of the donations will equal more than $34 million.

Alexander McQueen and Louis Vuitton

Other high-end brands, including Alexander McQueen and Louis Vuitton, are also finding ways to rethink and reuse. At Alexander McQueen, surplus fabrics are donated to fashion universities in the U.K. so students can use them in their work. “The ethos at Alexander McQueen is that everything we use in researching and designing collections has always been archived and stored,” says Creative Director Sarah Burton. “We’ve never thrown anything away.”

Louis Vuitton, too, has found thoughtful ways to repurpose both its fabrics and show sets. Extra fabric is given a new life via the Be Mindful initiative, a capsule collection of excess textiles reinvented into fashion jewelry. Additionally, recent collections have creatively demonstrated ways in which upcycling can be accomplished, including new designs crafted from the overstock of past seasons.

“With time and education, the fashion community has taken drastic steps to reinvent our business wheel,” says celebrity stylist Jill Lincoln.

“We still have a long way to go, but there are so many new and existing brands that are dedicated to making permanent changes.” ■

BIJAN'S BIG IDEA

The self-proclaimed world's most expensive men's store, Bijan, may be known for being appointment-only, but the brand showed its softer side almost immediately when the COVID-19 pandemic hit. Founded in 1976 by the late Iranian immigrant Bijan Pakzad, the label gave back to its Beverly Hills community by partnering with L.A.-based AcuShield this spring to order 10,000 face shields, which were directly donated to frontline workers. The effort was a conscious attempt to give back to the neighborhood Bijan has called home for more than 40 years. “We are living through a difficult and unprecedented time—not just in our country, but around the world,” says Nicolas Bijan, Pakzad's son and the current vice chairman of House of Bijan. “We felt it was important to use our brand and platform to help those in need, as well as inspire others to do the same.”

by my beautiful Umbria, it has been an inspiration: The colors, smells, tastes, landscape and people in this region move my soul.” That devotion has grown into a company mantra, which relies not only on designing artisanal luxury products that last, but also into the treatment of the land where the brand is headquartered and the people who work there. “The company was founded on taking care of people and is rooted in humanistic sustainability,” says Cucinelli. “I feel responsible for the people who work for the company to not only have balance in their lives, but also a great quality of life.”

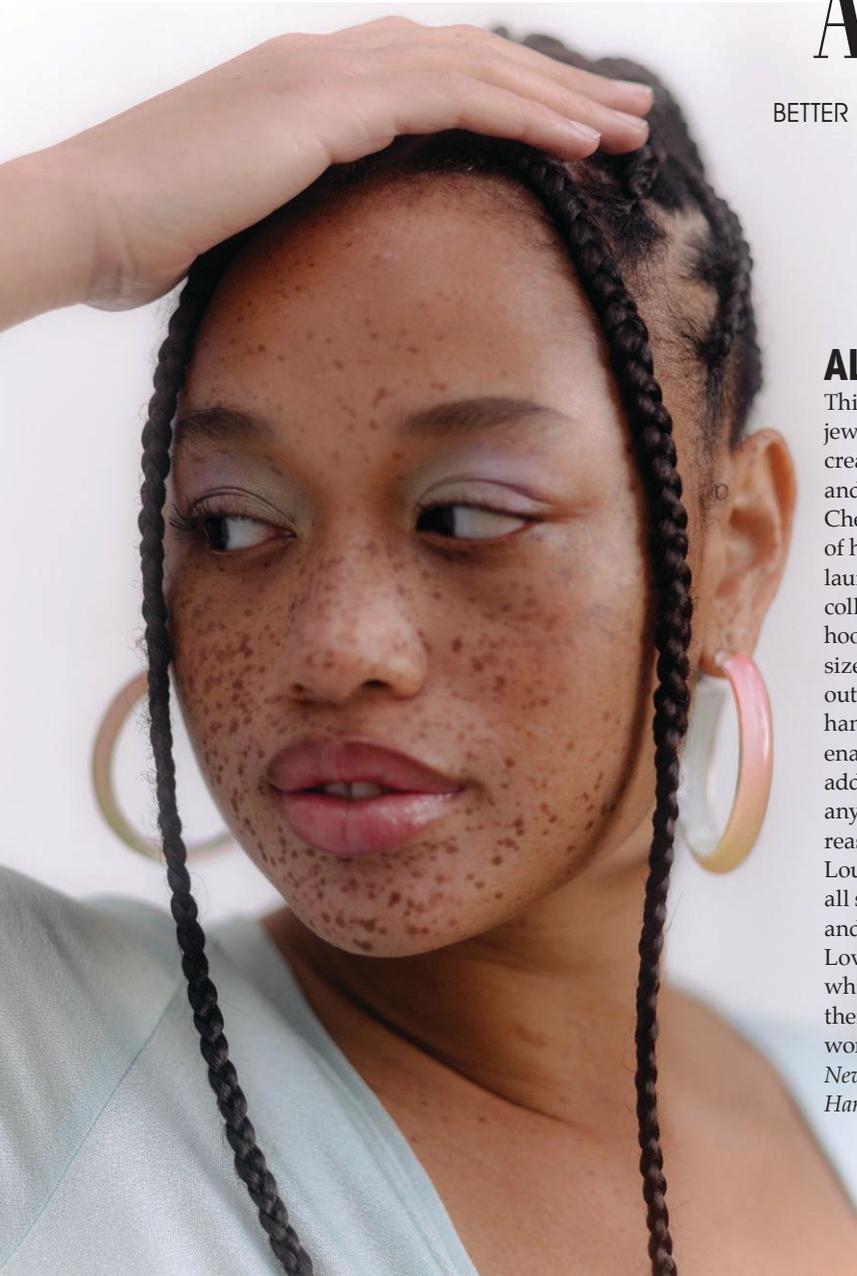

The designer's latest actions prove he is indeed a man of his word, as he recently announced he would give—not sell—the Rethink, reuse and find ways to encourage the next generation. These ideas are part of the Louis Vuitton (top left) ethos and the philosophy at Alexander McQueen. Look for thoughtfully repurposed materials in everything from clothing to accessories to the runway itself.

THE LEIBER COLLECTION—A HAVEN OF ART AND STYLE NESTLED IN EAST HAMPTON—REOPENS WITH TWO MESMERIZING EXHIBITS.

BY ELIZABETH HARPER

It's where art, style and nature intersect. It's a compilation of musings and a love story emulated in physical form. The Leiber Collection reopens, health and safety precautions in place, with two exhibits that celebrate creatives Gerson and Judith Leiber's long and storied careers, their championing of the arts—and how each of their own endeavors inspired the other's.

The tale dictates that when the Leibers first moved into their summer home in Springs in the mid-1950s, Gerson, an established, well-respected painter, quickly became a first-rate garden enthusiast. In a whirl of outdoor activity, the late artist once described his newfound passion: "I immediately started a flurry of activity and it developed into an almost all-encompassing, overwhelming desire to garden. I enjoyed it continuously and completely." Summers out East in the '90s and early 2000s saw mornings spent toiling in the garden and afternoons in the studio, painting the fresco moments he had captured in his mind's eye.

Clockwise from top: Judith Leiber's Buddha bag; Fish bag; Gerson Leiber's "The Gate Is Open"; the painter's "View From the Conservatory"; Flowered Parsee handbag; a ladybug creation from Judith.

Judith, whose enviable handbag designs remain fashion favorites, too plucked inspiration from the gardens on their estate. She transformed what was once kitsch—ladybugs, watermelons, bunny rabbits—into crystal-embroidered, collectible works of wearable art. Leiber Collection Director Ann Fristoe Stewart notes Judith had the uncanny ability of seeing a clutch in anything, combining her unique elegant sensibility and whimsical design aesthetic into handbags inspired by tomatoes, asparagus, eggplants and butterflies, among other objects found on grounds of their Hamptons homes.

And thus the first of the exhibits, Garden As Muse, was formed. On display through winter in the Renaissance-style Palladian Leiber Collection, it showcases the couple's works, from Gerson's garden paintings to more than 600 of Judith's designs. Beyond the museum's stately antique wooden doors lies the second of the exhibitions, The Garden of Friends.

Long supporters of the arts, the Leibers built their East Hampton museum to house their collections and highlight the artists they admired. The Garden of Friends is a testament to that commitment. While the permanent collection in the Sculpture and Shade Garden counts pieces from friends and neighbors, such as Bill King, Costantino Nivola, William Tarr and Ronnie Chalif, The Garden of Friends showcases works from some of the East End's most celebrated talents, including Philippe Cheng, Pipi Deer, Jill Musnicki and Almond Zigmund, among others.

Of the exhibits, Stewart says, "One cannot help but feel it is a breathing space where one can get lost in the serenity and splendor for a while." The Leiber Collection is an ode not only to Gerson and Judith's patronage of the arts, but also to their enduring careers and the gardens that inspired them. Limited entrance; Wed., Sat. & Sun., 1-4PM, or by appointment; 446 Old Stone Highway, East Hampton, leibercollection.org ■

SISTERS MADELINE AND ANNA ZAKARIAN DISH ON THEIR DEBUT COOKBOOK WITH DAD-CHEF GEOFFREY ZAKARIAN AND WHY COOKING AS A FAMILY WILL NEVER GO OUT OF STYLE.

BY SYDNEY SADICK

I've never spent more consistent time with my family than I have this summer. It's been full of bonding moments, including tie-dyeing clothes together, spending weekends playing Kadima at Cooper's Beach, making homemade pizzas with fresh dough from Sag Pizza and other fun activities. Even though this summer has been so different than all the others, these are memories that will last forever—and family time is always on-trend.

For sisters Madeline and Anna Zakarian (@thezakariansisters)—who are 13 and 11, respectively, and the most precious young ladies you'll meet—there's nothing that bonds them and their dad, chef Geoffrey Zakarian, more than being busy in the kitchen. The trio also works closely on City Harvest initiatives together, something they've been doing long before quarantine.

It was only natural that the girls teamed up with their dad to debut their first cookbook, The Family That Cooks Together ($13, Little Brown and Company), featuring 85 recipes from the Zakarian family's table that prove you don't need to be an adult to make a great meal. "I made a cookbook for a school project when I was in third grade, and since then, we've always had the idea to make a real one. Finally, we did it! But it's not like any other kids cookbook—it's geared toward whole family cooking and it's filled with dishes you can make any day of the week," says Madeline.

When it came to deciding which recipes would be featured among the 85 delicious picks, the girls initially developed a spreadsheet where they would sort out their favorites. They ended up including the foods the Zakarian family craves and eats on a daily basis. Next came photographing the recipes followed by the design process. The girls were totally hands-on from start to finish, truly making it a project of their own.

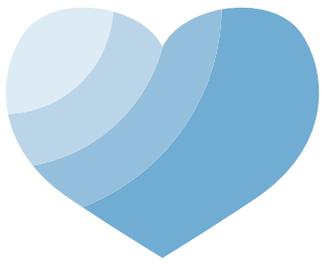

Each sister has learned top cooking tips and tricks from her dad. Anna always remembers to make her boiling pasta water taste as salty as the sea before adding the pasta, and she loves to make eggs, especially frittatas. "We are a big breakfast household, so this is something I learned early," she says. "I also love to make all sorts of drinks—fizzy flavored sodas, smoothies, milkshakes." Hungry yet?

As for whether the girls want to become chefs when they grow up? Their interests span beyond the kitchen. "I definitely will always cook for the rest of my life, but I don't know about a chef," Madeline tells me. "I have always had a thing for fashion and design. I have played the piano since I was 5 (my dad plays the piano, and he is really good at it!) and my sister sings and is really good at sailing."

Clearly, the ambition in the Zakarian household is far and wide, and this cookbook is only the beginning. Keep an eye on these two young women—their futures are bright!

The Family That Cooks Together is available for preorder now and ships Oct. 6.

WHEN A BRAZILIAN FASHION HOUSE COLLABORATES WITH A GERMAN TASTEMAKER, THE RESULTS ARE UNIVERSALLY UNIFYING.

BY ANETTA NOWOSIELSKA

For its latest collection, Brazil-based Frescobol Carioca (frescobolcarioca.com) partnered with model, photographer and global tastemaker Johannes Huebl for a capsule collection that celebrates Rio de Janeiro's sunny spirit and the persistence of trendless dressing. "All of the pieces are made from the finest materials, crafted by skilled artisans," explains Huebl who, in addition to his fashion duties, happens to be the husband of our cover girl, Olivia Palermo. "I think it's always worth investing in well-made pieces that will stand the test of time." This approach has yielded a collection composed of stalwart pieces to build the perfect wardrobe imbued with sartorial refinement.

Inspired by Huebl's jet-setting lifestyle and signature styling, the Frescobol Carioca x Johannes Huebl capsule centers on the brand's trademark emphasis on craftsmanship. It includes the debut of tailored pieces, like the deconstructed blazers, available in both lightweight Italian-milled linen seersucker and in single- and double-breasted silhouettes. These suited options blend effortlessly with the new long-sleeved Tencel camp collar, tropical cotton and denim shirts, as well as impeccably cut swimwear and the ultimate chino trousers. Colorwise, expect a palette of military green, dark navy and off-white that takes cues from Huebl's personal wardrobe and coincidentally the natural tones of Rio's coastline.

Fans of the brand, which has previously popped up in East Hampton, will be able to get their hands on the collection this September when it arrives just in time for Indian summer.

COME THIS FALL A NEW BRAND IS SET TO STOMP INTO YOUR WARDROBE. THE BRAINCHILD OF BRIDGEHAMPTON'S OWN HELENE AND LEILA FELDMAN, THE COLLECTION OF SHOES, BOOTS AND CLOTHING BLENDS THE CLASSIC AND AVANT-GARDE. PREPARE TO BE BLOWN AWAY.

BY SPOORTHI SATHEESH

What compelled you to start a fashion brand?

Helene Feldman: We decided to launch HAIKI (haiki.com) out of a purely selfish motivation. We found ourselves constantly on the hunt for comfortable, edgy platform shoes but couldn't find a luxury product that checked all the boxes. Most high-end designers only offered limited styles every season, but no one designer had offered a complete collection of sandals, boots and evening shoes that were both elegant and wearable (for more than an hour!). And so we decided that if we couldn't find it, we'd make it.

What is the vibe of the brand?

Our designs are purely instinctual, with an eye toward architecture, minimalism and brutalism. Pulling inspiration from the greats, we envision HAIKI as the romantic child of Rick Owens and Comme des Garçons. We design using 50 shades of black (is there any other color?), focusing on bold textures, skins and leathers. We do not believe in seasons; boots can be worn in summer and sandals in winter. The HAIKI woman loves to wear leather and bold designs, both rebellious and elegant, and can go from boardroom to ballroom in the same pair of shoes.

You seem to have really tapped into the celebrity market.

At the request of Elizabeth Saltzman, we created a small collection of beautiful evening shoes that were worn by celebrities during the 2020 award seasons as well as Paris and New York fashion weeks. This first collection has been worn by numerous stars including Gabrielle Union, Idina Menzel, Ashley Benson, Joey King, Barbie Ferreira, Saoirse Ronan, Tessa Thompson and Logan Browning.

What's next for HAIKI?

We anticipate expanding beyond shoes and ready-to-wear, starting with a curated collection of jewelry and statement pieces that vibe with the HAIKI femme. Drawing from what works in our wardrobe, we have conceptualized chunky rings made out of stone, and a series of arm and wrist cuffs. We've also created the prototype for the perfect crossbody black leather bag, designed for the active HAIKI woman in both function and form. For the first capsule collection, we designed three heights (fun fact: Lady Gaga wore the 140s to the 2020 Super Bowl!). In the upcoming collection, we will be introducing a combat boot and lug city boot, our take on the shifting trend of how people are dressing. The HAIKI ready-to-wear collection will feature an oversized blazer, a bomber jacket, a bomber/blazer combo, a long vest and oversized hoodies and muscle tees in cotton and cashmere. Everything is designed, sourced and manufactured in New York. We are anticipating the launch in fall 2020.

of his talent, but also his aura. The bon vivant lives for "shenanigans of the first order," he says, citing "4-by-4 car rallies across Africa to save elephants, ridiculous trips to Monaco to party it up at the Grand Prix, private dinners with ex-cellar wines from some of the finest vineyards in the world and racing 100-year-old classic teak sailing yachts all over the world." It's all very 007, and that's part of the allure. "Our clients look to us as much as an arbiter of taste, curator and fixer of things as a bespoke tailor," he says. "We love beautifully cut and exactly made bespoke suits—don't get us wrong—but that is not our raison d'être. We just believe dressing the part makes a difference, and makes for a richer, more memorable experience for everyone involved."

When he's not racing yachts in Nantucket or jet-setting with the glitterati (in non-COVID times, of course), Quinn enjoys the peace and quiet offered out East. You might be able to spot him: Just look for red socks. "I used to wear them so much in the mid-1990s that several of my girlfriends from the legendary private bar Momo on Heddon Street simply called me 'Red Socks,'" he reveals of his sartorial secret weapon. "But the real secret is to dress every day as if for a role in a movie. Inhabit the character you are going to be in that movie. And dress accordingly."

If you think Duncan Quinn (duncanquinn.com) is merely in the bespoke suit-making business, think again. The NYC-based tastemaker has built a clothing brand championed by some of the Hamptons' biggest sartorial enthusiasts, yet there's more to Quinn than skill with a measuring tape. Perhaps that's why the entrepreneur has managed to "make a lot of lemonade out of those 2020 COVID lemons," he says with his signature

wit. "We are lucky in that our business is unusual in the first place," he continues. "It is difficult to explain as we are not really the store many think us to be. More of a private members club... where the entree is acquiring beautiful pieces of clothing from us."

Quinn's success stems from "an absolute focus on quality," he explains—sourcing materials from the finest mills, producing unique patterns for each client and entrusting a small in-house team to craft every suit by hand. The results are impeccably tailored works of art—"very English, structured, waisted and rock 'n' roll," he says, adding that each suit is finished with a trademarked pocket flap and smoking skull-printed lining. The skull logo embodies his brand and is even featured on the bottles of his Quinn Rosé (drinkquinn.com) sold throughout the Hamptons and beyond.

However, Quinn has collected his discerning clientele not only because

TAVERN

An array of classic American dishes from Amagansett newcomer Main Street Tavern

THE NEW LOCAL MAIN STREET TAVERN OPENS ITS "OUT"-DOORS IN AMAGANSETT WITH ALL-AMERICAN TAVERN-STYLE FAVORITES, AN EXTENSIVE BAR AND WELCOMING HOSPITALITY. BY SPOOR THI SATHEESH

Main Street Tavern is making its entrance out East with a look and taste aligned with a changed world. With special attention paid to current sensibility, the tavern offers an inviting 54-seat open-air beer garden enveloped in beachy, neutral tones to complement Amagansett's white-and-gray surroundings. In contrast, the interior features darker, richer coloring from walnut and natural-wood surfaces to ebony-hued walls. "Taking cues from traditional town-favorite meeting spots like country taverns and inns, we were most inspired by the town itself," says Wilpon Kamel of Ronen Lev, a New York-based architecture and interior design studio entrusted with the design. "We wanted the space to feel like a second home to Hamptons locals and weekenders." Foodwise, executive chef Anand Sastry developed a balanced menu of seasonal and local classics such as the Tavern wings, juicy steak sandwich and burgers along with healthy salad options made with fresh produce. To top it off, the bar offers classic and elevated cocktails, a wide selection of spirits and a rotation of draft and bottled beers. 177 Main St., Amagansett, 631.267.0400, mainstreettavern.com

Sparkle!

THIS SEASON, THE TOP CHAMPAGNE PRODUCERS ARE TOPPING THEMSELVES. WHETHER YOU'RE LOOKING FOR A GIFT RICH IN EFFERVESCENCE OR YOU WANT TO TAKE YOUR APERITIFS UP A NOTCH, HERE ARE A FEW OF THE VERY FINEST NEW OFFERINGS.

BY DAVID ZIVAN

Besserat de Bellefon 1843 Midnight Cuvée

For a house established in 1843, the Champagnes of which were selected for service aboard the Concorde in 1978, Besserat de Bellefon has remained somewhat quiet over the decades. This dazzling, decidedly French packaging announces a new era for the brand as Godefroy Bajiot takes over from his father, longtime head of the family-owned house. Limited to only 1,843 bottles, the blend launched in 2019 and shares the same food-friendly, nutty style that has made the wines a favorite of fine restaurants. The property's chef de cave recommends pairing it with a lobster dish embellished with a shellfish and star anise sauce. That should do just fine. $299, besseratdebellefon.com

Krug Collection 1988

The House of Krug is known for setting its bottlings aside, typically for a decade, before they're even released, part of what gives the wines their signature depth and elegance. The limited re-release of the Krug Collection 1988—the first of three legendary years in a row—shows an intense gold color and a nose of white flowers and apple tart. The wine has blossomed quietly in the house's cellars, creating a true treasure for bubble aficionados. $899, krug.com

Bollinger 007 Limited Edition Vintage 2011

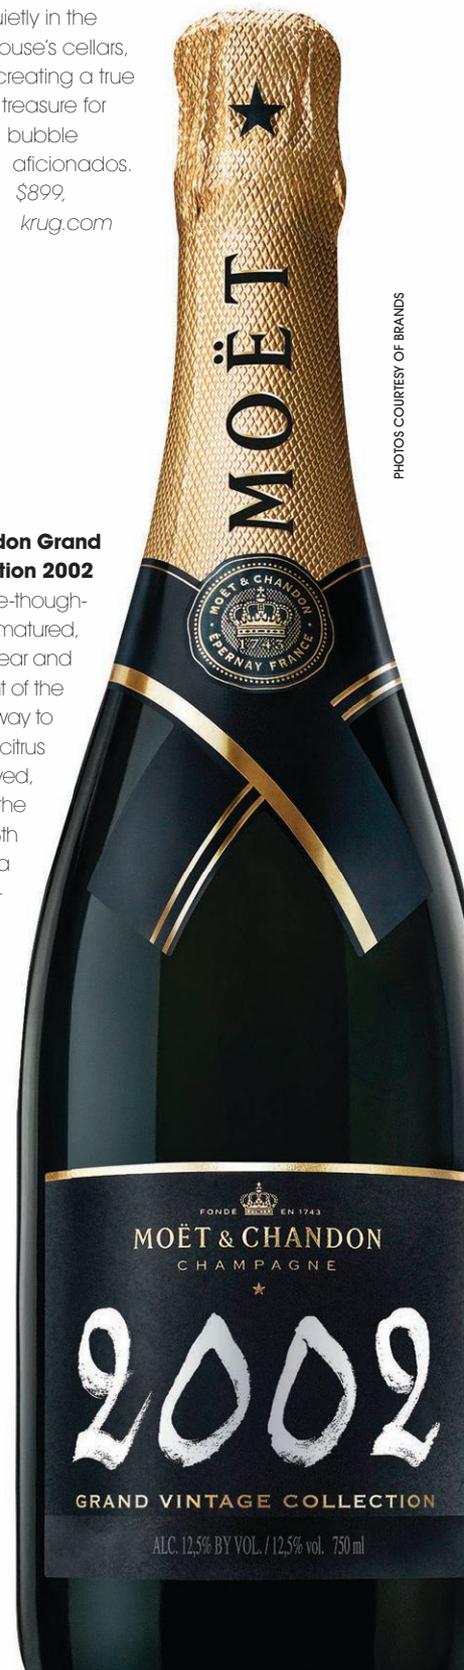

It's said that Bollinger became James Bond's bubbly of choice (since Roger Moore's era, anyway) with a simple handshake deal, as befits someone in Her Majesty's secret service. To mark the film series' 25th installment, Bollinger brings out a slick new bottling, a blanc de noir sourced from a single grand cru vineyard in Aÿ, France. Vinified in oak barrels and aged for seven years under cork, the rich palate offers stewed fruits and a mineral-note finish. In the glass it's as golden as a gun. $230, champagne-bollinger.com

Dom Pérignon Plénitude 2 2002 This legendary producer, named after the clergyman credited with inventing the style, has a charming term for the lovely plateau sometimes reached by great aged Champagnes: plénitude. The house rightly describes it as a "second life," and we are lucky to share in the gorgeous moment. "Plénitude 2 reveals... vintage 2002 in a new light," says chef de cave Vincent Chaperon, "bringing the wine a radiant golden vibrancy." The classic toastiness of the house is given complexity here, with hints of confit fruit, marzipan and fresh coriander. $390, domperignon.com

Moët & Chandon Grand Vintage Collection 2002

The fruit on this dense-though-dancing sparkler has matured, offering candied pear and plum at the front of the palate and giving way to subtle spice and citrus notes. There's a honeyed, toasty warmth to the wine, the house's 68th vintage, that makes it a real crowd-pleaser—much like the other distinctive treats coming from the Grand Vintage library the winery maintains. $109, moet.com

AS ONE OF COMPASS' (COMPASS.COM) TOP REAL ESTATE PROFESSIONALS, CHERIE BERGER OPENS UP ABOUT HER PASSION TO SATISFY EACH CUSTOMER'S NEEDS WHILE WORKING ALONGSIDE HER HUSBAND, STEVE, AND DAUGHTER, ASHLEY. BY CELIA KONSTANTELOU

How did you get started at Compass? At some point last summer, I passed the Compass office in the Hamptons. I had been familiar with them, and I noticed they had a saying on their door, which was 'Our mission is to help everyone find their place in the world.' And it kind of stuck with me. So when I heard Compass was coming to New Jersey, I kept my eyes open. When I got the opportunity to interview with them, I was very excited. I was like, 'Where do I sign?'

How is it working with your family on The Cherie Berger Team? [My husband] has worked out to be a great asset. We both have a great work ethic, and that makes a really big difference because we can cover for each other and we can complement each other. As hard as it is to work with a family member, this seems to flow perfectly. Last year, our daughter decided she wanted to join us. And again, she works just as hard as we do, and we have built a great team like that.

Does this make it hard to balance work and personal lives? To be successful in real estate, you need to be involved in other people's personal lives and in every corner of their being: their emotions, their finances, their family. So in order to really accommodate your clients, you need to be available more than you would with another profession. Thus, we tend to put our clients first, sometimes over our personal life, and that's the hard part with real estate. But I feel it's sort of necessary to do that to a certain degree because I need to make sure that my clients are happy and that they are taken care of. We have to be there for them. And it's always great to have a team because if I can't accommodate a client, my husband can or my daughter can. I don't see how a single agent can actually do this business alone anymore because there's just too much involved with accommodating people, marketing, sales, as well as technology.

DEREK AXELROD'S DESIGN INFLUENCES COME THROUGH IN HIS CONTEMPORARY HAMPTONS HOME. BY ASHLEY WU

The home is often described as an extension of the self, but Derek Axelrod's bespoke Mill Creek home is a chronicle of his design journey through New York and beyond. The idiosyncratic developer helps clients build homes tailored to their needs and personalities, and following in his own mission, Axelrod's hypermodern property reflects his audacious New York spirit as well as a more bucolic side. With successful projects under his belt, such as Teqa restaurant in Manhattan, the Hamptons offer an ideal escape from his frenetic work life.

Attention to detail is at the forefront of Axelrod's design philosophy. In his six-bedroom home, a 3D art wall and elegant lines throughout break up the space. He honed his keen eye during days spent observing his father as he designed storefronts for his clothing brand, French Connection. On days when they would visit, his father would "look at extreme detail when walking each and every one of his retail stores, from the way a garment was hung to the way a light hit the mannequin," Axelrod says.

Gathering additional influences from his mother, who designed various family homes, Axelrod became intrigued by the principles of interior design. After the completion of his Manhattan apartment, his friends were impressed by the elegant minimalism of the space and began enlisting him for advice on their own homes. Axelrod realized he might have found his true calling.

When he started working on the Water Mill house two years ago, Axelrod could not anticipate the toils and reward that would go into the project. "The challenges of building a house are extremely difficult when you build modern. In traditional home building, you can hide imperfections much easier than in modern design," says Axelrod. The contemporary style prevalent in his homes was a labor of love. "Everything is sort of squared off and minimal: no clutter. Everything is behind cabinetry, no handles on any doors, just a very clean look. That's what I enjoy," he says. Although he incorporates a range of style sensibilities for clients, his personal methods indicate his metropolitan upbringing.

Completed mid-2020, the home is filled with handpicked art and custom features provided by local and international brands. Locally, Michael Chiarello from MAC MetalWorks in East Hampton elegantly streamlined the space with the staircase, steel rods, the outdoor sundeck and other elements. Darnell Murphy from Off the Wall Studio crafted the concrete wall finish that adds texture and movement throughout.

Despite the abode's highly designed aesthetic, a pastoral motif is present throughout. Axelrod notes that at times, horses can be seen roaming the environment. The harmony of nature and design was key to the living area, his favorite room. "I created a space where you feel like you are one with the farm and horses. Large glass openings as well as high ceilings allow the sky and farms to come right into the open space," Axelrod says. In the basement, a giant mural featuring Clint Eastwood presides over a Ping-Pong table. Additionally, the master bathroom is a haven for relaxation with its state-of-the-art European walk-in showers with trench drains.

Although the geometric structures of the house give insight into Axelrod's meticulous design, the large-scale art pieces he curates are the best indicator of his identity. In the kitchen/dining room, a large photograph taken by Roberto Dutesco brings haloed light and color into the room. The photograph, entitled "Linda, Christy and Naomi," presents three horses with windswept manes reminiscent of the piece's '90s supermodel namesakes. Alluding to its owners affinity for nature, the artwork also encapsulates a desire for freedom. The art is part of a photography series called The Wild Horses of Sable Island.

Created by Pauly Originals, the Clint Eastwood painting was chiseled into the plaster and concrete of the basement wall to create a textured, dimensional feel. "Any art I choose has been more about something that connects to me rather than collecting for value or monetary reasons," says Axelrod. "Most of the art I have is from friends of mine who I love to show off to get them the acclaim they deserve."

The source of Axelrod's affection for the painting is indubitably personal. Clint Eastwood in Sergio Leone's famous Spaghetti Western The Good, The Bad and the Ugly appeals to the more outlandish aspects of Axelrod's persona. Positioned next to the movie theater, this portrait of Axelrod's favorite director and actor is a testament to the powers of building personal mythology and American grit, two things that Axelrod knows well. When it comes to design, Axelrod asserts that "it's all in the details." When it comes to his home and his life, it is apparent that the details are where the most fantastical ideas can grow. ■

STYLE STAR OLIVIA PALERMO HAS FINALLY LAUNCHED HER HIGHLY ANTICIPATED CLOTHING COLLECTION, AND IT OOZES THE INSOUCIANT
ELEGANCE THAT EARNED HER A FEVERED FOLLOWING.

MY EARLIEST FASHION

memories are times spent at antique road shows with my mother and aunt,” offers style star Olivia Palermo when asked how her sartorial spark first ignited. “With my aunt being the head of the couture department and costume jewelry at Doyle’s and my mother being an interior designer, a lot of afternoons were spent on the hunt for beautiful objects, fashion included,” she says. “I think it was the exposure to vintage and antiques that formed my appreciation for craftsmanship.”

“Believe it or not, I actually wanted to be a sports commentator when I was younger,” she says when asked if fashion was always her passion. “My mother did always dress me nicely, so I guess I had a fondness for clothes, but I enjoyed sports much more at that age. It wasn’t until later in my teenage years when I interned in editorial at Quest magazine that I really started to home in on my love for style.”

Fast-forward several decades, 6.4 million Instagram followers and gazillions of street-style posts later—and her highly anticipated eponymous ready-to-wear is finally here. Launched this past February, her debut 84-piece Olivia Palermo Collection (oliviapalermo.com) boasts her signature style and is meant to be trans-seasonal. All of the feminine flourishes that Palermo is known for are there—tie-neck blouses, long skirts, delicately detailed jackets and blazers. “Creating my own collection was a natural progression for me. My genuine love and understanding of fashion paired with successful collaborations and more than a decade learning the ins and outs of the industry had given me the confidence to take the leap,” she says. “For years people have asked me when I would create a collection, but I always thought it really important to fully experience and understand every element of the industry I could before doing so,” Palermo explains of the years she spent collaborating with brands ranging from Banana Republic to Aquazzura. “This way, I would be able to offer my community, and the world, a collection that is thoroughly considered in every way possible. Attention to detail, impeccable fit, quality materials and construction are all integral. I wanted this collection to be seamlessly integrated into your wardrobe and be styled as an expression of your own individuality.”

Audrey sunglasses, $570,
at jimmychoo.com;
Limelight Gala watch, price upon request, at piaget.com.

To help bring her vision to life, Palermo enlisted a full design team led by Alice Fern, an alum of Rebecca Minkoff and Michael Kors. “The aesthetic of the collection is similar to my own personal style: eclectic while always tailored and polished. These are timeless, elegant pieces that can be easily incorporated into anyone’s wardrobe... but lend themselves to great styling too.” A refined elegance punctuated with fashionable flourishes define the line—think jeweled buttons on a plaid jacket or lace cuffs on a boyfriend blazer. “The silk separates have definitely been a staple during these months at home when you want to be a bit more comfortable but still appropriate for work video meetings. And the leathers are amazing for the transitional seasons!”

The New York native and regular Hamptonite hopes to capture the same spirit of self-expression for which she is so celebrated. “I find it incredibly motivating to see women excited about getting dressed and passionate about the clothing they wear,” she says. “My goal is to create clothing that inspires the same feeling and promotes creativity and self-expression. I want to empower women to be the best versions of themselves.”

The Manhattan-based maven has stayed sane thanks to her wellness routine—and regular escapes out East. “I have really gotten into sound meditation in the past couple of years,” she shares. “I find that it really helps me reset and recharge from the daily stressors of business and just life in general. Working out too—whatever routine Tracy Anderson Method has me doing that week definitely keeps me grounded. Super thankful for her at-home workouts.”

The style star laments the impact the pandemic has had on the fashion community, but has remained optimistic by taking action to support her community and donating both personally and professionally to a myriad causes. “As an ambassador for Dress for Success, we have been trying to partner on ways to fundraise in lieu of the normal programming that COVID-19 has made impossible,” she says. “Dress for Success has always done incredible work providing resources to women, and the fear is that those resources are only going to be more crucial as we see the long-term impacts of the pandemic on the community.”

Palermo hopes that some silver linings will emerge from the current challenges. “I hope that the fashion calendar resets, as it’s daunting, and that there is a renewed appreciation for creativity and quality rather than just overconsumption. And I certainly hope that the fashion industry’s hesitancy toward inclusivity ceases. I want inclusivity, in all forms, to be more prevalent for genuine reasons and not just commercial ones.” This hope extends beyond the fashion community as well. “I hope the world will learn to be nicer to one another and to the planet we call home. We are all humans and should be treated equally,” she says. “It is time we go back to the basics and build a stronger foundation as a global community.”

Palermo hints that there will be big news from the brand later this fall. “I always have something up my sleeve.” ■

THE AESTHETIC OF THE COLLECTION IS SIMILAR TO MY OWN PERSONAL STYLE: ECLECTIC WHILE ALWAYS TAILORED AND POLISHED. THESE ARE TIMELESS, ELEGANT PIECES THAT CAN BE EASILY INCORPORATED INTO ANYONE’S WARDROBE... BUT LEND THEMSELVES TO GREAT STYLING TOO.”

ALTUZARRA RISING

With a new East Hampton store, a toddler and a fall collection, Joseph Altuzarra is leaning into the brave new world that looks nothing like the place where he got his fashion start years ago. We caught up with the designer, who is forging the future without forgetting his roots.

BY ANETTA NOWOSIELSKA

“I AM REALLY TRYING TO BE AN INDUSTRY PLAYER AND BE AT THE FOREFRONT OF THIS IDEA OF BEING WAY MORE TRANSPARENT OF HOW THINGS ARE MADE AND WHY WE MAKE THINGS.”

Let's start with your decision to open a store in East Hampton. How did that come about?

It was sort of like a two-pronged decision. We built a house here, having the personal connection that I do with the Hamptons, and realizing that a lot of my friends were here; there was a real desire to see fresh, new things. I decided that I would love to open a store here. From a more pragmatic, business point of view, there is a real opportunity now in the Hamptons to build a brand and speak to new customers about who we are and to reach a new audience. I think those two things sort of came together and made it a very easy decision. Usually decisions that come easily tend to be the most successful ones.

How do you align yourself with a growing retail footprint in today's world where many are advocating conscious consumerism?

That's a really great question. For us it's really about building community and also about storytelling. The more I go through this crisis, through this sort of transition in our industry, the more I realize how important it is to convey what our process is as a team. To be transparent about how we make things, why we make things. I think in a lot of ways what differentiates us outside of what the clothes look like is the process and point of view. We have a lot of sustainable initiatives in place, and how those affect the clothing, the things that are actually on the racks, that goes directly to storytelling. I have been on a lot of really interesting Zoom calls with other American designers or other designers globally in the luxury sector. What has been really interesting to hear is how we are all aligned around this idea that we have to be more responsible and accountable and we have to think about the changing habits of consumers. I think, as you astutely referenced, there is a growing concern for the environment and being a conscious consumer. I am really trying to be an industry player and be at the forefront of this idea of being way more transparent of how things are made and why we make things.

You are involved in A Common Thread, the fashion fund for COVID-19 relief. What are your thoughts about the evolution of your industry challenged by the crisis?

For me it has always been clear from the beginning of the pandemic that things should not go back to normal. This is obviously devastating, but it allows us to make a real change in the industry that has really been needed for a really long time around how we conduct business and how we make things. That is really a top-to-bottom conversation, from manufacturing and sourcing down to discounting. There is definitely resistance—the heart of these initiatives is coming from independent designers, who are owner-operators of their own businesses, who have felt the repercussion of this pandemic and feel responsible for the effects that we are having on the industry. I think where we have seen more resistance is frankly bigger groups or bigger companies, who will have to come to terms with how to move with the industry. I feel like my role as an ambassador of sorts of these initiatives is to educate and be open to conversation.

Would your alliance with Etsy be part of that undertaking?

Etsy collaboration actually started a year ago. Part of that came from my real interest in craft—I am myself a crafter. I was really interested in working with a company that was supporting small business. Throughout the years of being on Etsy, I discovered so many incredible craftsmen. We actually approached Etsy with this idea of collaborating with some of their sellers, and it was such an incredible experience to use my platform to highlight their work. It came out at such an important time, at the beginning of the pandemic, when small business was really feeling the effect as much, if not more, than some of the other businesses. To be a platform for them was super inspiring and gave me a lot of joy.

How does your creative process work now?

I have an incredible team that I work very closely with. When we first left the city and closed the office about four and a half months ago, I was really like, 'I don't know how we can continue. How are we going to have fittings? How are we going to be able to collaborate on drawings or prints?' Because so much of that was in person. We have been able to find new ways of being creative. In a really strange way, it has allowed me to be more creative. I actually had to go back to doing things by hand again. It sounds sort of silly, but I have had this business for 12 years, and after 12 years you lose that sense of getting your hands dirty. I have rediscovered the joy of making things myself.

How does your multicultural background fit in this picture?

That is probably the most important thing in my creative process. I feel like I have always struggled with identity. Growing up in Paris I was half Chinese, part American; I felt like I never fit in. I don't think I was aware of it initially, but now I am much more aware of what identity means, how people use clothing to express it. I was initially interested in what it means to be French, what it meant to be American outside of the conventional parameters. In my collections I always look at things from my heritage and make them into a fetishistic idea of what is French or what is American to create something altogether new.

With September around the corner, tell us about your fall collection.

Ideally, we would like to do some sort of a show. We are still working on the collection itself. I wanted it to feel very poetic; I wanted there to be a very strong tension between these two opposing feelings everyone is feeling... alienation versus community, fear versus happiness... I am very excited about it, actually. I don't know what will happen in September, but I am very excited about it nonetheless. 52 Main St., East Hampton, altuzarra.com ■

After weeks of careful planning, Hamptone Tracy Anderson and her team have transformed the Water Mill location into a fully equipped outdoor studio.

TAKE IT OUTSIDE

GET RIPPED WITHOUT SETTING FOOT IN A GYM THANKS TO NEW ALFRESCO CLASSES AT TRACY ANDERSON'S WATER MILL STUDIO.

BY KELSIE BARTON

Tracy Anderson is the latest fitness guru to get creative with hosting workout sessions in the age of social distancing. For the celebrity trainer, the solution was opening her Hamptons studio "alfresco," moving all classes onto the lawn at the popular Water Mill location to ensure safety while continuing to deliver results. Participants can still expect the same environment they know and love in the outdoor installation—yes, including the signature Super-G Cardio floors—plus mirrors, shades to block the sun and wireless headphones to adjust the music to their preferred volume. "The feedback has been fantastic," says Steven Beltrani, chief communications officer for Tracy Anderson. "Clients love the opportunity of having somewhere safe to go every day and being able to connect with studio friends again—socially distanced, of course." The plein-air studio will be open through Sept. 7, with 15 participants allowed per class. Email hamptons@tracyandersonmethod.com to snag your spot. # Your Aromatic Essence

ACCORDING TO ELIZABETH TAYLOR, "THE BEAUTY OF FRAGRANCE IS THAT IT SPEAKS TO YOUR HEART... AND HOPEFULLY SOMEONE ELSE'S." WITH MASKS DE RIGUEUR, PERHAPS AROMA CAN EXPRESS OUR ESSENCE IN LIEU OF A SMILE, LIPSTICK OR GLOSS. BY ANNEISE PETERSON

ELLIS BROOKLYN

The Ellis Brooklyn woman cares about sustainability and innovation. She is not granola-clean; she's the luxurious modernist. SALT, one of the latest fragrances in the Ellis Brooklyn collection, reflects that beachy Amagansett or Montauk lifestyle—unique and relaxed, recalling salty, sun-warmed skin.

AERIN

Seeing fashion in the details, the AERIN girl finds inspiration through travel and culture. Inspired by the brilliant sunlight of Sicily, AERIN Limone di Sicilia's luxurious citrus floral blend evokes pure radiance. The girl misting this sparkling summer scent glows with a fresh, youthful attitude, livening a luncheon or dancing barefoot in the summer rain.

CHANEL

Iconic in her style and fearlessly feminine, the Chanel N°5 woman keeps her mystery. With its unprecedented use of aldehydes, which add layers of complexity, N°5 was the world's first abstract fragrance. The unique charisma of the Chanel N°5 girl makes her presence known wherever she goes, embracing florals composed around May rose and jasmine with bright citrus top notes. Touched by a hint of bourbon vanilla, she leaves an incredibly sensual trail.

As Hamptons season sizzles toward its end, many wish to capture the spirit of summer all year long. Enter locally based brand Hampton Sun (hamptonsuncare.com) with its bestselling scent Privet Bloom. “Privet Bloom is the scent of the season,” says Hampton Sun founder and CEO Salvatore Piazzolla of the omnipresent privacy hedge seen all over the East End. The local

Ligustrum shrubs are popular not only for their use as beloved borders but also for their fragrant, white summer blooms. “It’s been the No. 1 scent in the Hamptons since we launched,” Piazzolla says. “The stores share with me how people come in and buy in multiples for their homes, making sure they’re fully stocked.”

Piazzolla explains that when it came time to source the scent for his brand, he needed to only look out the window for his inspiration. “I remember my perfumer asking what we wanted our brand to smell like, and all I could think of is a beautiful afternoon biking to the beach when the privet hedge was in blossom—smelling that distinct white flower. It forever stuck in my scent memory, and I said, ‘This is the scent we need to bottle.’”

The scent of privet blooms blends with notes of lily of the valley, white hyacinth and jasmine in Hampton Sun’s fragrance collection that includes a candle, parfums, body gel, body lotion—and now a newly debuted hand sanitizer. In other words, there is now a myriad ways to keep the scent of Hamptons season with you all year long.

Private and charming, accommodations at The Baker House 1650 exceed expectations.

KING SIZED

MAKING THE BAKER HOUSE 1650 INTO YOUR HAMPTONS HUB COMES WITH MANY REWARDS. BY SPOORTHI SATHEESH

A 17th century Cotswolds-inspired architectural gem set in the heart of East Hampton, The Baker House 1650 is known for its unparalleled luxury and relaxing amenities year round. Set on lavish estate grounds with manicured gardens, pools and some of the oldest trees in town, the property also holds a small secret—an on-site spa located on the lower level of the main house. Following a day of pampering and a good night's sleep, guests are greeted by a personal chef with homemade breakfast options to enjoy by the pool or in the privacy of their room. "The Baker House 1650 is all set to welcome back its guests with newer and indulging ways of staying in the property," says Michael Snell, the property representative, about recent upgrades to adhere to current safety protocols. "We offer socially distanced yoga, which is held every Saturday on the Baker Carriage House greenspace, along with exciting experiences such as Evening with Rosé, another social-distanced event where guests are able to sample select rosé wines including those from the notable Wölffer Estate and Out East." Raise a glass to finding your next splendid staycation spot. 181 Main St., East Hampton, bakerhouse1650.com

THE ULTIMATE ACT OF SELF-CARE? PLANNING A GETAWAY TO THE ST. REGIS ASPEN RESORT. BY J.P. ANDERSON

Wellness is top of mind from the moment you check in at The St. Regis Aspen Resort (rooms from $349 per night, st-regis.marriott.com): Throughout the elegant, rustic-chic lobby are dispensers of chlorophyll-spiked water for maximum hydration and pH balance; Remède Spa offers CBD massages, steam caves and an oxygen lounge (a godsend for acclimating to altitude) among its world-class offerings; and the cozy dining room, Velvet Buck, features a Food as Medicine menu collab with mushroom-focused brand Four Sigmatic to introduce guests to the benefits of fungi. Of course, wellness is about balance, and this luxe haven knows how to have fun too. Each St. Regis property prepares its own spin on the bloody mary (the Downhill Red Snapper boasts basil, dill, two olives and a pickle), and guests can get a taste every morning at 11:15 in the Mountain Social bar. Every evening at 5:15, the courtyard hosts a Champagne sabering to celebrate the transition from day to evening, a beloved St. Regis tradition since 1904. The property's biggest attraction? That might just be Kitty, the hotel's Bernese mountain dog, a bundle of energy and a bona fide influencer (no, seriously: @kittythebernese); he's the embodiment of the playful yet polished St. Regis Aspen philosophy.

Stellar Style

THIS SEASON, LOOK TO THE STARS FOR YOUR FALL FASHION FORECAST.

BY ASTRID STARRE

LEO

July 23-Aug. 22

It can't be said enough that these kitties are fierce—and that certainly applies to fashion. Lucky for you animal prints have everyone purring this season, so get your claws on one of the leopard-print puffer jackets, coats or dresses to layer on your spots.

VIRGO

Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Virgos love a perfectly tailored skirt suit—and fittingly, the look is everywhere as we head into the cooler months. Practical and prepared are your mantras, so whether it is your workoutwear or something more formal, you are always pulled together.

LIBRA

Sept. 23-Oct. 21

Artistic Libras love an ensemble with edge, so consider the punk plaids that ruled the runways for fall. Libras gravitate toward darker hues, so balance the look with something soft like the shag "it" coat of the season.

SCORPIO

Oct. 23-Nov. 21

Scorpios love to shroud themselves in mystery, so the trending highbrow hoodie is just the thing for you. The latest nouveau grunge and punk plaid styles also appeal as the made-for-the-shadows vibe always suits your mood.

SAGITTARIUS

Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Adventurous Sags are forward-thinking seekers, so futuristic metallics add some flash to your closet this fall. Mix liquid silvers and shimmering bronzes for a look that will really allow your style star to shine.

CAPRICORN

Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Practical Caps need a push when it comes to trying on the trends. Look to the 1940s-inspired styles sweeping the collections for an elegant riff on the classics. Layer bias-cut slip dresses with cozy sweaters for an outfit that is equal parts comfort and chic.

AQUARIUS

Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Your eccentric nature means you are all about letting your fashion freak flag fly. Express yourself with a madcap mix of patterns, styles and hues. Pull it all together with some sharp accessories or a beautiful blazer to keep it looking fashionable rather than freakish.

PISCES

Feb. 19-March 20

Soft, flowing silks and chiffons suit this water sign. Fishes love the poetry of motion, so look for garments that can catch a breeze and move.

ARIES

March 21-April 19

As independent fashion warriors, these rams charge ahead and do their own thing. Always on trend, you rock fashion-forward attire with confidence, so go bold with one of the new cape coats—or armor up with a head-to-toe leather look.

TAURUS

April 20-May 20

Comfort is key for bulls, but thanks to Venus (your ruling planet) you also love a beautiful wash of color. Harness the season's chicest craze with a head-to-toe color story in muted monochromatic hues of cream, dusty rose or other earth tones. Amp up the luxury by opting for rich silks and soft knits.

GEMINI

May 21-June 20

Twins are maestros at being able to mix and match, and duality is where you thrive—think barrettes and blazers, or tough tweeds paired with feminine frills. Only you can work one of the trending retro-prep argyle sweaters with grunge-inspired leather pants—or opt for the color cacophony of a patchwork dress. Have fun playing as the only rule this fall is there are no rules!

CANCER

June 21-July 22

Soft, feminine details and the romantic spirit of period films capture your heart, so this season's Victorian-inspired tops and dresses appeal to your softer side. Layer them under a leather jacket as crabs always feel best with a protective shell.

Aries can armor up with an all-leather look by Shoshanna.
